BOSTON UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF COMMUNICATION

CONGRATULATES

the 2024 New England First Amendment Coalition's honorees for their work affirming the importance of building a society based upon the principles of open and transparent government.

Boston University College of Communication

The College of Communication has been educating professional communicators since 1914. Its students represent the next generation of leaders in journalism, emerging media, cinema, advertising, public relations, and media studies.

ABOUT STEPHEN HAMBLETT AND THE FIRST AMENDMENT AWARD

Stephen Hamblett's first newspaper job was as a summer reporter at his hometown paper, the Nashua Telegraph. It must have been a rewarding experience because soon after he graduated from Harvard, he signed on at The Providence Journal. That was in 1957, and Hamblett never looked back.

Hamblett rose from advertising department clerk to publisher in a career fueled by qualities for which he became famous — quick wit, dedication to excellence, warmth, good humor, passion for his community and a deep-seated belief in the wonder of newspapers.

During his leadership, The Providence Journal prospered financially and journalistically, the two most fundamental measures of a newspaper's success. The Journal's strong financial health drew the attention of the Belo Corporation, which acquired The Providence Journal Co. in 1997.

The publisher's job is a tightrope act, at once community booster and — via the newsroom — community watchdog. Hamblett walked that rope with skill and integrity for 12 years, from 1987 to 1999, never flinching at either responsibility.

Howard G. Sutton, who succeeded Hamblett in 1999, said, "Steve Hamblett ran The Providence Journal during an era of hectic change in the media business. He did so with vision, compassion, decisiveness, ingenuity, and calm, leading the firm around numerous economic shoals as it became a truly national media company, all the while maintaining the Journal's long commitment to high-quality journalism and community improvement."

One of the many proofs of the newspaper's commitment to journalistic excellence came on Hamblett's watch in 1994 with the award of a Pulitzer Prize for investigative reporting on "pervasive corruption within the Rhode Island court system."

"The Journal newsroom held Steve in high regard," said Thomas E. Heslin, former executive editor of The Providence Journal. "He was widely respected as a great businessman, but he knew that good journalism is good business. The newsroom always knew it had his support."

Hamblett

A national figure as well as a local one, he served on the boards of the Associated Press, Inter-American Press Association and the Smithsonian Institution.

He was a single-minded and hard-working executive but left plenty of room for his family, friends, an occasional drink, a good cigar and a joke. His passing in December 2005 at age 71 generated obituaries from coast (the Los Angeles Times) to coast (The New York Times) and all points in between.

Hamblett's memory lives on in dozens of ways. Add to them The Stephen Hamblett First Amendment Award, which is given each year to an individual who has promoted, defended or advocated for the First Amendment throughout his or her career.

*"The liberty of the press is essential to the security of freedom."
John Adams.*

HAMBLETT FIRST AMENDMENT AWARD RECIPIENT SARAH-ANN SHAW

Sarah-Ann Shaw, the late trail-blazing journalist and community advocate, mentored a generation of young reporters and is perhaps best known for her contributions to the public affairs program "Say, Brother" (renamed "Basic Black" in 1998) which debuted on WGBH in 1968.

Shaw was the first Black female reporter hired to a local network news show when she joined WBZ-TV in 1969. During her time with the stations, Shaw covered many issues facing under-represented communities and not otherwise receiving much media attention, such as education and prison reform. She spent 31 years at WBZ, working as a general assignment reporter and anchoring public affairs programs. (Photo by Hakim Raquib and used with permission).

Journalism that makes a difference in people's lives.

At Hearst Connecticut Media Group, we strive to produce journalism that changes lives for the better, moves people in power to act and sheds light on problems that affect our communities.

'When Schools Use Force,' a multi-part series exposing systemic abuses in the use of restraint and seclusion in schools nationwide, did just that. Soon after publication, lawmakers introduced legislation in multiple states to address the issues raised and called for more funding, resources, training and better oversight to limit the use of these practices.

In big ways and small ways, Hearst Connecticut Media Group works each day to better our towns, cities and our state - by producing journalism that makes a difference.

Hearst Connecticut Media Group commends the 2024 New England First Amendment Coalition's honorees.

ABOUT MICHAEL DONOGHUE AND THE FREEDOM OF INFORMATION AWARD

Michael Donoghue is an award-winning news and sports writer. He worked for more than 40 years at the Burlington Free Press and now is a freelancer.

He was selected as the 2013 New England Journalist of the Year by the New England Society of News Editors and in 2015 received the Matthew Lyon First Amendment Award. Donoghue has been an adjunct professor of journalism and mass communications at St. Michael's College in Colchester, Vermont since 1985.

Donoghue has served as an officer, including executive director, with the Vermont Press Association since 1979. He is a former board member of the New England Press Association and has served continuously as state chairman of Project Sunshine in Vermont since it was started by the Society of Professional Journalists in 1990.

Donoghue is often credited as being a driving force behind the improvement to Vermont's open government (public records and meetings) legislation. He has made his own successful legal arguments to judges about keeping courtrooms open and not sealing court documents.

Donoghue and the Free Press have been honored for his work on a local, state, regional and national level. Donoghue was selected in 2007 as the winner of the Yankee Quill Award, the top lifetime honor for print and electronic journalism in New England.

He has been inducted into five Halls of Fame, including as a charter member for the New England Press Association's Hall of Fame and as a charter member for the Society of Professional Journalists/National Freedom of Information Coalition Hall of Fame. Donoghue is a former board member of the New England First Amendment Coalition.

The FOI Award is given each year to New England journalists who protect or advance the public's right to know under federal or state law.

Donoghue

NEFAC would like to recognize

Paul and Ann Sagan and The Robertson Foundation

for their support of our coalition and the New England First Amendment Awards.

Thank you for all you do.

TRUSTED JOURNALISM CONNECTS NEW ENGLAND

WCVB
BOSTON'S NEWS LEADER

Proud to honor the legacy of Sarah-Ann Shaw and salute Maine Trust for Local News and Daniel Dunn for their work to increase information access and government transparency

DONOGHUE FOI AWARD RECIPIENT MAINE TRUST FOR LOCAL NEWS

Maine Trust for Local News — which includes publications such as the Sun Journal, Portland Press Herald and Kennebec Journal — fought relentlessly for information about the Oct. 25 mass shooting in Lewiston.

The newsrooms began making public record requests just hours after the shooting and spent more than six months fighting denials and other challenges to the public's right to know about the tragedy. Reporters faced enormous and consistent resistance by Maine State Police who attempted to block access to information about how they responded.

MAINE TRUST —for Local News—

PREVIOUS RECIPIENTS

2023 Nancy West | West is founder of the New Hampshire Center for Public Interest Journalism and is executive editor of its website InDepthNH.org.

2022 Telegram & Gazette | The Worcester Telegram & Gazette prevailed in a three-year legal battle for the internal affairs records of officers working in its city police department.

2021 Bangor Daily News | The newspaper used public record laws to report on the misconduct of police and corrections officers in Maine through its "Lawmen Off Limits" series.

2020 Hearst Connecticut Media Group | A team of seven journalists spent more than six months investigating allegations of sexual abuse connected to Boys & Girls Clubs nationwide, finding more than 100 cases of abuse.

2019 Hartford Courant | The Courant successfully fought a legal battle at the state Supreme Court for information related to the 2012 shooting at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, Conn.

2018 Todd Wallack | As a reporter for The Boston Globe's Spotlight Team, Wallack reported stories about online accessibility to criminal records and the overuse of public record law exemptions to keep information secret.

2017 Sun Journal | The Sun Journal of Lewiston, Maine, uncovered and successfully fought a state court policy that required all dismissed criminal cases to be sealed after 30 days in violation of the public records law.

2016 Jenifer McKim | A reporter for the New England Center for Investigative Reporting, McKim was recognized for her series "Out of the Shadows," an investigation into child abuse.

2015 James W. Foley (posthumously) | A seasoned war correspondent, New Hampshire native Foley worked in Iraq, Afghanistan, Libya and Syria, reporting on the lives of the disadvantaged and their suffering.

2014 Brent Curtis | A reporter for the Rutland (Vt.) Herald, Curtis fought for access to certain police records and helped make Vermont police departments more transparent.

2013 Don Stacom | Stacom, of the Hartford Courant, pursued stories about police misconduct through the Connecticut Freedom of Information Commission, prompting a shakeup of the New Britain, Conn., police department.

ABOUT ANTONIA ORFIELD AND THE CITIZENSHIP AWARD

The Antonia Orfield Citizenship Award is given to an individual from one of the six New England states who has fought for information crucial to the public's understanding of its community or what its government is doing (or not doing) on its behalf. The candidate should have shown tenacity or bravery in the face of difficulty in obtaining information that the public has a right to know.

Orfield

Orfield was an author, mother, optometrist, clinical professor and active citizen. She worked to improve the schools in the communities she lived in, serving on one of the first elected local school councils in Chicago. She also sought to advance her profession and improve the lives of her patients through the use and teaching of therapeutic non-surgical methods of vision therapy. As a researcher, she knew the importance of access to data to analyze, draw conclusions and challenge existing assumptions of screening and treatment protocols. Dr. Orfield operated a vision clinic in Mather Elementary School in Dorchester, Mass., which documented the improvement of children's grades and test scores with unconventional vision-related remedies to learning problems. The findings were published in several articles and in "Eyes for Learning," her 2007 book.

The New England First Amendment Coalition provides a free mentorship program for journalists working in the region. Reporters, editors and producers looking for guidance in a variety of professional areas can apply to be paired with a veteran journalist with relevant expertise.

ORFIELD CITIZENSHIP AWARD RECIPIENT DANIEL DUNN

As a member of the Police Oversight Commission in Hamden, Conn., Daniel Dunn increased public access to records that documented law enforcement interactions with community members.

When Dunn discovered that some of these records were illegally destroyed, he worked to synthesize important information using the remaining records and he successfully appealed a public records case against the town. Dunn's efforts increased transparency about policing and raised awareness of the challenges using Connecticut's Freedom of Information Act.

Dunn plans to begin law school at Quinnipiac University this fall and to continue his open government advocacy in Connecticut.

PREVIOUS RECIPIENTS

2023 Susan Hawes | Hawes engaged in a protracted battle for information about the Cumberland County (Maine) Jail and its employment practices.

2022 Tara Gunnigle | Gunnigle used the New Hampshire Right to Know Law to investigate the illegal sale of a property to an acting town official.

2021 Jeanne Kempthorne | Kempthorne resigned in protest from her position as general counsel to the Berkshire County district attorney after being ordered not to release public records that were clearly public.

2020 Cook v. Raimondo Student Activists | The Providence public school students filed a federal lawsuit against Rhode Island officials arguing that the state is failing to provide the civics education they need to be engaged citizens.

2019 David Saad | Saad and several other citizens formed Right to Know NH as a citizen coalition working to improve transparency in New Hampshire government.

2018 Hyde Square Task Force | The community center used the Mass. public records law to uncover a state mandate that required the owners of the TD Garden to pay millions to Boston recreational facilities.

2017 Donna Green | Green successfully fought for the right to electronic records under the N.H. Right to Know Law, prevailing in the state's highest court.

2016 Michael A. Champa | By prevailing in a public records case heard by the Massachusetts Supreme Court, Champa uncovered systemic failures and inequities in the state's special education services.

2015 Harriet Cady | A long-time open government activist whose advocacy led to several Right to Know lawsuits, Cady helped create the watchdog group Right to Know NH.

2014 Kit Savage | Savage's investigation uncovered violations of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, which formed the basis of a complaint to the Connecticut Dept. of Education.

2013 David Lang | After a nine-year crusade, Lang exposed the mismanagement of health insurance premiums, resulting in a court order to refund $53 million to public employees.

SPECIAL RECOGNITION NEW HAMPSHIRE PUBLIC RADIO

New Hampshire Public Radio began reporting in 2022 about allegations of sexual abuse by the founder of the state's largest addiction treatment center.

The reporting was followed by multiple acts of vandalism at the homes of NHPR journalists and the homes of their families. Following investigations by the FBI and state and local authorities, a federal grand jury indicted four men for their roles in an alleged campaign of intimidation against the journalists. Two have pleaded guilty to felony charges.

A civil lawsuit brought against NHPR, its journalists, and some of their sources by a central subject of the reporting was dismissed by a Rockingham County Superior Court judge earlier this year.
